The tide is an amazing thing...

Riding a bicycle of predictability, the tide doesn't come and go as it pleases, but beats to a rhythm that can be predicted until the end of time. Breathing life into our oceans, the tide cleans, refreshes and leaves reminders on the beach of the awesome power and ingenuity of creation.

For us fisherman she's as important as making sure your flares are current and there's ice in the esky. That's because the tide controls piscatorial eating habits and has a large say in when you are likely to run aground and where.

For us, our annual January week at the beach was quite different this year as we took our 11 month old grandson (on our own) away for the week and... we had a ball. No fishing or building projects but lots of fun.

Days were dictated by a pattern of feeds, sleeps, nappy changes, play and drives/walks to the boat ramp- little kids, I have come to remember, are a bit like the tide!

During week I developed a few deeper appreciations of how much hard work babies are and what a challenge it is to change a nappy that's fuller than a centipedes sock draw.

But also of God's amazing capacity to create life, freshness and renewal.
